Pitch Anatomy and Ethical Boundary

A short pitch has four parts: hook, clear offer, audience benefit, and call to action. Use a fictional classroom product/service or your fictional Expert Edge idea. Do not make real sales, links, QR codes, scarcity, discounts, testimonials, guarantees, health claims, income claims, or collect personal data.

Label the four parts in the SparkClean model after your teacher reads it:

One claim that would need verification before a real pitch:

Offer and Audience

Fictional product/service and what the audience receives:

Specific audience and situation:

What the audience cares about—and evidence/logic for that claim:

One audience assumption I should not treat as fact:

Plan the Four Parts

Hook:

What it is:

Benefits (not only features):

Call to action:

Full 30-Second Draft

Write about 4-6 short sentences. Accuracy matters more than hype.

Words/claims to verify or revise:

Transfer and Exit

One skill used in this pitch and how it transfers to a different career:

One sales/marketing career, what that worker produces, and one preparation fact:

My Day 2 delivery route: live partner / small group / teacher conference / recorded audio-video / AAC
