Four professional characteristics

CHARACTERISTIC	WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE
Work ethic	Reliable effort and responsibility
Integrity	Honest action and records, even when no one is watching
Dedication	Sustained commitment to quality and purpose
Perseverance	Continuing through challenge while keeping safety and quality boundaries

Why perseverance does not mean continuing an unsafe or unauthorized task:

Case 1: Missed checklist item

A fictional technician notices that one checklist field is blank after the item has moved to the next station. A supervisor is available.

Characteristic most needed and why:

Trustworthy action:

Record or supervisor route:

Harm the action prevents:

Case 2: Uncertain measurement

A team receives two conflicting measurements from an approved classroom test. A teammate wants to report the number that makes the design look best.

Characteristic, action, and honest record:

Case 3: Incomplete handoff

A fictional worker reaches shift change with one observation not yet verified. The incoming worker needs an accurate handoff.

Characteristic most needed:

What the outgoing worker should say or record:

What the worker should not claim:

Harm the honest handoff prevents:

Case 4: Pressure to sign

A worker is pressured to sign an inspection they did not complete.

Characteristic, action, documentation, and supervisor route:

Personal evidence audit

Choose a prior class artifact. Employment history is not required.

Artifact or class task:

Professional characteristic demonstrated:

Visible action in the artifact that proves it:

One honest limitation or revision still needed:

Next action and completion evidence:

Independent exit case

A worker is pressured to sign an inspection they did not complete.

Professional characteristic:

Appropriate action:

Documentation or supervisor route:

Why this is stronger than signing and planning to fix it later:

One phrase that keeps the record accurate:
