Attention to Detail Checklist

Good detail helps another person act without guessing. For each audio cue, specify the action, material/object, surface or environment, timing, intensity, and mood when relevant. Do not create or perform unsafe sound effects.

One detail category and why the sound team needs it:

The same idea transfers to a résumé because:

Rewrite Cue 1 and Cue 2

Original: Running sound

Resume Evidence Audit

Keep the résumé private. Peer review is optional and uses a student-controlled redacted copy; students never exchange devices or logins.

One vague claim in my résumé:

Revised with action + task + evidence/result:

One inconsistent date, tense, heading, or capitalization pattern:
